1. Language for invitations

General English I | Unit 5, Session 4 | Name: _____ Class: F / D

First read the language with a partner. Identify phrases for inviting, accepting, declining and checking first. Try a short exchange; keep these pages open throughout the lesson.

Purpose	Ready-to-use language
Check availability 詢問是否有空	Are you free on ___ at ___? Are you around on Saturday afternoon? Are you doing anything on Friday evening?
Introduce the celebration 介紹慶祝活動	I'm having a ___ to celebrate ___. We're getting together to celebrate ___.
Invite 邀請	Would you like to come? Would you like to join us for ___? Can you make it?
Ask for details 詢問詳情	Where is it? / What time does it start? How long will it last? / What should I bring? How much will it cost? / Can I bring a friend?
Give details 提供資料	It's at / in ___. It starts at ___. It lasts one hour. Please bring ___. It's free. / It costs MOP ___ per person.
Accept clearly 明確接受	Thanks! I'd love to. / That sounds great! Yes, I can come. Please count me in. I can bring ___. I'm looking forward to it!
Decline politely 有禮婉拒	Thanks for inviting me, but I can't make it. I'm afraid I'm busy then. I have a group meeting. I need to finish my assignment. Could we meet another day?
Check first 先確認再答覆	I'm not sure yet. I need to check my calendar. It depends on the time. What time does it start? I'll get back to you by ___.
Suggest / agree on a change 建議或議定更改	Would ___ work better? / How about ___? Could we meet at ___ instead? Yes, that works for me. Let's meet on ___ at ___.
Follow up and confirm 跟進並確認	Have you checked your calendar? Can you come? So, you can come on ___ at ___? Yes. / Sorry, I still need to check ___.
Repair / close 澄清或結束對話	Could you say that again? / Do you mean ___? Thanks. Please let me know by ___. See you then! / Have a great time!

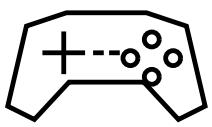

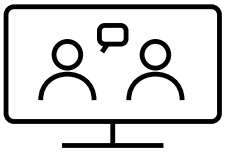

Meaning check: "I'm free" means available 有空. "It's free" means no cost 免費.
"I'm not sure" is not a confirmed yes. Add what you need to check and when you will reply.

Choose words for your own celebration

Occasions: “to celebrate ...”

finishing our first group project	完成第一份小組作業
giving our first economics presentation	完成第一次經濟學匯報
finishing midterm exams	完成期中考試
a classmate’s birthday	同學生日
one month at university	入學滿一個月
welcoming new club members	歡迎社團新成員

Activities: “We plan to ...”

Let’s play games. 玩遊戲	Let’s watch a drama. 看劇	Let’s listen to music. 聽音樂	Let’s have a picnic. 野餐

More choices: share some snacks 分享小食; have a meal together 一起吃飯; have cake 吃蛋糕; play board games 玩桌遊; take photos 拍照; sing karaoke 唱卡拉OK.

Time, place and practical details

Places: in the classroom; in the student common room; at the campus café; at the park.
Bring: a drink; some snacks; a board game; your own food.
Cost: free; MOP 20 per person; bring your own snacks.
Reply: by tonight; by 8 p.m.; by Thursday.

If someone cannot decide yet

Host: Would you like to come to my celebration on ___ at ___?
Guest: I’m not sure yet. I need to check ___.
Host: Okay. Could you let me know by ___?
Guest: Yes. I’ll get back to you by ___.

Preparation and written messages

Preparation: choose the activity; order food; buy drinks; book a room; make a playlist; send invitations; decorate the room. “We have already ___.” / “We haven’t ___ yet.”
Abbreviations: RSVP = please reply; ASAP = as soon as possible; PS = an extra note; Sat = Saturday; p.m. = afternoon/evening. Use abbreviations your reader understands.
Closings: Hope you can come! / I’m looking forward to it! / See you then! / Have a great time!

2. Prepare your two celebrations

Name: _____ Class: F / D Week: _____

Choose two celebrations or gatherings that you would like to organise, based on your own student life and interests. Make a complete plan for A and B. Each calendar slot is one hour.

Write dates under the days. Mark at least three BUSY slots: a class, group meeting, work or another plan. Choose two different free slots for your own celebrations; mark them A and B. Mark the other slots F (free).

Time	Mon Date: ____	Tue Date: ____	Wed Date: ____	Thu Date: ____	Fri Date: ____	Sat Date: ____	Sun Date: ____
10-11 a.m.
3-4 p.m.
6-7 p.m.

When you accept another invitation: write the host's name in that slot. A BUSY, A, B or booked slot is unavailable for another event at the same time.

Choose two occasions

Your classmates are first-year Applied Economics students. Choose from these ideas or use your own.

- finishing our first group project 完成第一份小組作業
- giving our first economics presentation 完成第一次經濟學匯報
- finishing midterm exams 完成期中考試
- a classmate's birthday 同學生日
- one month at university 入學滿一個月
- welcoming new club members 歡迎社團新成員

Celebration A	Celebration B
Occasion: _____ Activity: _____ Day/date: _____ Time: _____ Place: _____ Bring / cost: _____ Reply by: _____	Occasion: _____ Activity: _____ Day/date: _____ Time: _____ Place: _____ Bring / cost: _____ Reply by: _____

Use pages 1-2 for language. Complete both plans before writing. Keep your calendar private during the speaking rounds; explain your availability in words.

3. Write your invitation first

Choose one of your two celebrations: [ ] A [ ] B. Write a complete invitation to a classmate before the rotating conversations. Use friendly, polite language for this informal invitation.

Look at the model, then write

E-book p. 150: read the model invitation. Notice the opening, event details and request for a reply. Use p. 67, Ex. 9-10, and pages 1-2 of this handout for language.

Class target: 50-70 words. Include the occasion, activity, day/date, time, place, what to bring or cost, and a request for a reply. Use two clear abbreviations.

> Frame: Hi ___! I'm having a ___ to celebrate ___ on ___ at ___. We'll meet at / in ___. We plan to ___. Please bring ___. It's free / It will cost ___. Let me know by ___ if you can come. I'm looking forward to celebrating with you! PS ___.

Adapt the frame to your own plan. PS is for an extra detail. You may choose other clear abbreviations from page 2.

Check before the speaking rounds

[ ] The occasion and activity are clear.
[ ] Day/date, time and place match my calendar.
[ ] My guest knows what to bring or what it costs.
[ ] I have asked for a reply and used polite language.
[ ] I have used two clear abbreviations.

Partner check: Ask a neighbour to identify the event, time and place. Improve one unclear detail. Keep your written invitation as a prompt for speaking.

4. Rotate and invite

Four rounds with different partners. In the first two rounds, invite people to the celebration you wrote about. In the next two, use your other celebration. At the timer signal, finish your note and rotate as your instructor directs.

Each round: both partners invite and respond. Ask at least one detail question and one question about availability or preference. Use your written invitation, plans and language bank as support.

Host: Are you free on ___ at ___? I'm having a ___ to celebrate ___. Would you like to come?
Guest: [Check your calendar.] Where is it? / What should I bring? / How much will it cost?
Host: ___.
Guest: [Accept] Thanks! I'd love to. I can bring ___.
[Decline] Thanks for inviting me, but I'm busy then. I have ___.
[Check first] I need to check ___. I'll get back to you by ___.
Host: [Yes] Great, see you then! / [No] Thanks, maybe another time.
[Check first] Please let me know by ___.
Then swap host and guest.

Round / partner	My event A/B	Reply: yes / no / check	New information I heard

Useful questions: "What time works for you?" / "Would you prefer ___ or ___?"
Keep calendars private. When you accept an invitation, add the host and event to your own calendar. If three people work together, take turns so everyone invites and responds.

One invitation I received, for my written reply later:
Host: _____ Occasion: _____
Day/time/place: _____

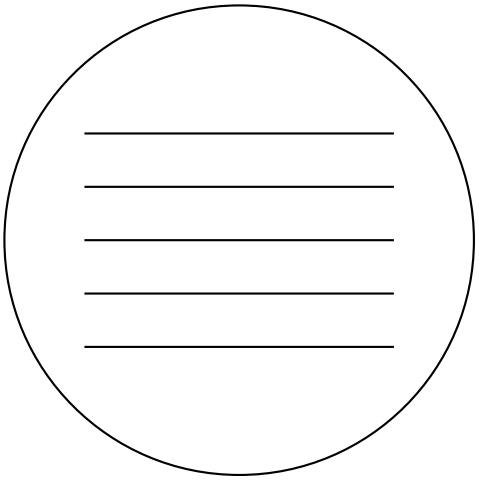

5. Bring back your results

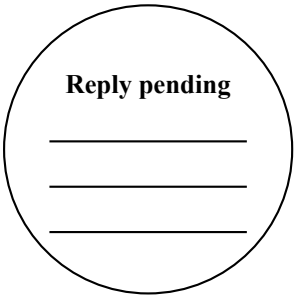

After the rotations, return to your seat. Put confirmed guests' names in A/B and uncertain replies in the smaller circle. Use the information you actually heard.

Celebration A - confirmed YES

Celebration B - confirmed YES

Only confirmed yeses go in A or B.

A person may attend both if the times fit.

Keep a pending reply separate until confirmed.

Update names only after a clear reply.

New information: I learned that ___ is free on ___ / prefers ___ / can bring ___.
My next step or change: _____.

Write a reply using the information you received

E-book p. 67, Ex. 11-12. Reply to one invitation you received: 25-40 words. Thank the host; accept or decline politely; add a detail, question or alternative; close politely.

Frame: Thanks for inviting me to ___. I'd love to come / I'm sorry, I can't make it. [Add a detail or short reason.] [Ask a question or suggest another time.] [Close politely.]

Report to a partner: "___ can come to A. ___ can come to B. ___ is still checking. I learned ___. I will ___."

Final check: [ ] I invited and responded in each round. [ ] I brought back new information.
[ ] My invitation and reply are clear and polite. Correct any event detail that changed.
