My celebration week

Name: _____ Class: F / D Week: _____

1. Build your calendar and plan two celebrations. Use an imagined week that feels like your university life. Each calendar slot is one hour.

Write dates under the days. Mark at least three BUSY slots: a class, group meeting, work or another plan. Choose two different free slots for your own celebrations; mark them A and B. Mark the other slots F (free).

| Time | MonDate: ____ | TueDate: ____ | WedDate: ____ | ThuDate: ____ | FriDate: ____ | SatDate: ____ | SunDate: ____ |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| 10-11 a.m. | | | | | | | |
| 3-4 p.m. | | | | | | | |
| 6-7 p.m. | | | | | | | |

When you accept another invitation: write the host's name in that slot. A BUSY, A, B or booked slot is unavailable for another event at the same time.

Choose two occasions

Your classmates are first-year Applied Economics students. Choose from these ideas or use your own.

- finishing our first group project 完成第一份小組作業
- giving our first economics presentation 完成第一次經濟學匯報
- finishing midterm exams 完成期中考試
- a classmate's birthday 同學生日
- one month at university 入學滿一個月
- welcoming new club members 歡迎社團新成員

| Celebration A | Celebration B |
|---|---|
| Occasion: _____Activity: _____Day/date: _____Time: _____Place: _____Bring / cost: _____Reply by: _____ | Occasion: _____Activity: _____Day/date: _____Time: _____Place: _____Bring / cost: _____Reply by: _____ |

Use the language bank: page 2 has occasion, activity, place and time options. Keep your calendar private during conversations; explain your times by speaking.

Stand up, walk around, invite

2. Rehearse with the language bank

Before walking, practise with your neighbour. Choose A or B from your own calendar. Swap roles so both people invite and respond.

Three practice rounds: 1 accept; 2 decline politely; 3 check first and promise a reply time. Swap host and guest in each round.

Host: Are you free on _____ at _____?
Guest: [Check your own calendar.] Yes, I am. / Sorry, I'm busy then.
Host (if your guest is busy): How about _____ at _____? [Try your other event.]
Host: I'm having a _____ to celebrate _____. Would you like to come?
Guest: Where is it? / How long will it last? / How much will it cost?
Host: It's at / in _____. It lasts _____. It's free / It costs _____.
Guest: [Choose an ending from the bank: accept / decline / check first.]
Host: [Yes] Great, see you then! / [No] Thanks, maybe another time.
[Check first] Please let me know by _____.

3. First invitation round

Stand up and walk around. Speak to four different classmates. At each meeting, both people invite and respond. Invite at least one person to A and one person to B. Change partner at the timer signal.

Keep calendars out of your partner's view. Ask at least one detail question; use the answer in your reply. After speaking, record key words. A polite refusal is a completed conversation. In a trio, take turns so each person invites and responds.

| Classmate | My event A/B | Reply: yes / no / check | New information I heard |
|---|---|---|---|
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |
| | | | |

Useful new information: a free time, an activity preference, a cost limit, what someone can bring, or when they will confirm. Ask: "What time works for you?" / "Would you prefer ___ or ___?"

Example note: Mei | B | check | needs to check a group meeting; will reply by 8 p.m.
My guest role: when I say yes to a classmate, I add their name and event to my own calendar.

4. Turn conversations into results

Write the names of confirmed guests inside the correct circle. Put uncertain replies in the smaller circle. Leave a circle empty if nobody has accepted yet.

Celebration A - confirmed YES

Celebration B - confirmed YES

Only confirmed yeses go in A or B.

A person may attend both if the times fit.

Keep a pending reply separate until confirmed.

After following up, move or cross out names.

5. Follow up and bring back something new

Stand up again. Speak to two people: follow up an uncertain reply, agree on a change, or invite a new classmate. Update your calendar and circles.

Ask: "Have you checked your calendar?" / "Can you come now?"
Change: "Would ___ work better?" / "Could we meet at ___ instead?"
Confirm: "So, you can come on ___ at ___?" / "Yes, please count me in."

If you change a time, ask your confirmed guests again before keeping their names in the circle.

New-fact choices: ___ is free on ___. / ___ prefers ___. / ___ can bring ___.

New information: I learned that _____.
My next step / change: _____.
I confirmed this with _____.

Report: "I invited ___. ___ can come to A. ___ is still checking. I learned ___. Our final plan is ___."

Write from your real conversation results

6. Notice the e-book models

Open p. 150 and p. 67, Ex. 6-9. Identify an invitation, an acceptance and a refusal. Find polite expressions, event details and abbreviations. Use these features in your own notes.

7. Write an invitation and a reply

Use your final calendar details and something you learned from a classmate. Class targets: invitation 50-70 words; reply 25-40 words. These are imagined classroom events.

> Invitation frame: Hi ___! I'm having a ___ to celebrate ___ on ___ at ___. We'll meet at / in ___. We plan to ___. Please bring ___. It's free / It will cost ___. Let me know by ___ if you can come. I'm looking forward to celebrating with you! PS ___.

Include: occasion, activity, day/date, time, place and a request for a reply. Use two clear abbreviations. Add a confirmed detail, e.g. "PS ___ is bringing ___." Adapt the frame to reach the class target.

> Reply frame: Thanks for inviting me! I'd love to come / I'm sorry, I can't make it. [Add a detail or short reason.] [Ask a useful question or suggest another time.] [Close politely.]

Detail choices: "Can I bring a friend?" / "I can bring ___." / "I might be a little late. Is that okay?" / "I have a group meeting then. Could we meet on ___?"

Check with your partner: [ ] details match the final calendar [ ] polite language
[ ] two clear abbreviations in the invitation [ ] a reply with extra information
[ ] one detail from our conversations. Improve one sentence.

8. Share your result

Use your circles and calendar to give a short report. Keep the notes as your Unit 5 work.

A new thing I can now say: _____.
